Dear God, Creator and Sustainer of heaven and earth. This morning we come to You, the beneficent and merciful One, asking for Your wisdom to review the legislation before us, and to fulfill the other duties of our day in a way that will glorify You. Thank You for life, health, and strength, and we do not take these things for granted. Please bless each man and woman here in the assembly and their family members. Especially today we ask for faithfulness to our call as servants of our state and of this great nation, a nation founded on principles like no other. Today give us the humility to admit our mistakes and to forgive others. Give us the courage to stand for liberty and justice for all, even if it is not popular. And give us the faith to believe in You, the Jesus whose faithful love never ceases.

In Jesus' name, Amen

Senator Lauwers' statement is as follows:

Colleagues, if you can remember back to when you first took office—for some, that was maybe 12 years ago; for most of us, six or eight years ago; and for a few, maybe even just the last two years—we came in somewhat blind, not knowing what LSB was or even what those letters stood for. We had ideas, we had plans, we all wanted to hit the ground running, but behind every great idea, great bill, and great law, is the Legislative Service Bureau.

I say all this because today we say goodbye to Michael L. Campana, director of the Legislative Service Bureau's Research Services Division. Michael started out in 1999 as a science research analyst and returned as a research analyst in 2005 after a brief two-year stint in Rhode Island. Much of what Michael did was behind-the-scenes, researching our great ideas, drafting our resolutions, and analyzing a wide range of topics, but most notably, environmental issues. As a natural leader, Michael worked his way up within LSB. In 2014, he became director of the research division. Throughout his tenure, Michael focused on quality, factual, and timely client service. He is known for his commitment to the Legislature and the legislative process, and on passing on institutional knowledge to Senators, Representatives, and legislative staff.

In addition to his direct work with Senators and our staff, Michael's team captures and documents the Legislature at important moments in time—upon entering a new term, throughout our tenure, documented in the Michigan Manual, farewell resolutions when we leave office, and memorial resolutions when a legislator passes. This ensures the history of the Legislature and of legislators are preserved.

Our world here in Lansing, in this building, on this floor debating and voting on our ideas and plans is made possible by the Legislative Service Bureau and people like Michael—the men and women behind the curtain. Michael, please accept this tribute as we honor your nearly 20 years of service. We wish you and your family all the best on your new adventure. Michael and his wife Julica and his daughters Aliana and Sofia—I guess Julica and Sofia are currently in the process of moving to Minnesota, that's why they're not here; his daughter Aliana is here in the Gallery—so please join me in thanking Michael, director of the Legislative Service Bureau's Research Services Division. Congratulations, Michael.

Resolutions

Senator Bumstead offered the following resolution:
Senate Resolution No. 68.

A resolution to designate July 2021 as Michigan Wildlife Conservation Month.

Whereas, Michigan’s natural beauty, abundant wildlife, and plentiful waters are enjoyed from Belle Isle to Baraga by millions of residents and visitors and should be preserved and protected for future generations; and

Whereas, Hunters and anglers were among the first conservationists, pushing for active wildlife management and conservation to ensure wildlife flourishes for future generations; and

Whereas, Science-based wildlife management and conservation decisions such as actively enhancing habitat, monitoring wildlife populations, preventing the spread of disease, and regulating hunting and fishing seasons help balance our use of natural resources with the needs of Michigan’s wildlife; and

Whereas, As a result of these protections, regulations, and extensive conservation efforts, Michigan populations of white-tailed deer, grouse, Kirtland’s Warbler, and many other species have rebounded from near extirpation; and

Whereas, Michigan has approximately 11,000 inland lakes and 36,000 miles of rivers and streams which provide abundant wildlife habitat; and

Whereas, July 1, 2021, marks the eighty-third anniversary of the effective date for the Pittman-Robertson Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act, which provides funding for wildlife management projects across the nation through the purchase of hunting equipment; and

Whereas, Hunting and fishing licenses provide tens of millions of dollars each year for wildlife conservation; and,

Whereas, Annually, hunters and anglers contribute $11.2 billion to Michigan’s economy and create 171,000 jobs, making these activities one of the state’s top 10 job-creating industries, according to a recent study by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs; and

Whereas, This year is also the eighth anniversary of the creation of the Michigan Wildlife Council, a bipartisan-approved panel entrusted with educating the public about the importance of wildlife management in preserving Michigan’s outdoor heritage for future generations; and

Whereas, In large part because of the council's activities, more Michiganders than ever before are aware of the essential role hunting and fishing play in conserving, managing, and protecting Michigan's wildlife; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That members of this legislative body designate July 2021 as Michigan Wildlife Conservation Month.

Statements

Senator Hollier asked and was granted unanimous consent to make a statement and moved that the statement be printed in the Journal.

The motion prevailed.

Senator Hollier’s statement is as follows:

On Monday, you’ll have seen the Supreme Court came back with a decision that was very important to me, that was very exciting. I have been the beneficiary of one legal settlement to date. I was written a check after I graduated from college—as many of you know, I played Division I football and ran track—and I got a check because my name, image, and likeness had been used in a video game, a video game that is no longer made. That video game is no longer made because once they realized they would have to pay athletes for the usage of their name, image, and likeness, the business model didn’t make sense for them because they would then have to negotiate, and they didn’t want to negotiate because that would say that me as a person—my name, image, and likeness—was valuable.

You will remember that last session, I introduced legislation to extend a similar level of protection to every Michigan resident, something that is critically important, something that still hasn’t happened yet. In the Supreme Court, it was a unanimous decision and I’m not typically quoting the concurring opinions of Justice Kavanaugh, but he went on to say that in no industry, no business, could a business model be sustained by saying it is critical to their business model by not paying the people who produce.

You will remember last week we celebrated Juneteenth, which was the end of chattel slavery. I am not saying that college athletes are dealing with anything like that. What I am saying is that as a country, as a nation, we are grappling with how do we fund and pay for things that people earn, to treat them in a manner that depicts and recognizes the value they produce. Our country was built on value-added proposition and we all know that the people who make college sports valuable are athletes and that the time they spend getting good at those gifts, that by and large God gave them, it’s fleeting. It’s a very limited amount of time. Some people say, Well, they get the benefit of an education. So does the person who plays the trombone or marches in the band or sings in the choir or does any other thing. It's just only athletes are precluded from earning based on who they are, from their name, image, and likeness, from getting a job because somebody likes what they do on the field. In this case, that was one of the things that now can change, so you could now hire one of those athletes and say it's because you like them as a person, because you value what they do and the contributions and sacrifices they made. You couldn't do that before, so if you went and said, Hey, I'm a big Spartans fan and I want to hire so-and-so to be in my office and work because they want to get into politics afterward, you could not have done that because the NCAA prevented it.

As we look forward and think about all the things this body has to do, as we talk about it, it is going to be critically important that we find more ways and more space to empower people to earn based on who they are. Though the case on Monday was about college sports, the same thing is true about high school students, about middle school kids, and all the like, because no one says to Britney Spears or Justin Bieber, You're just a kid, you can't make any money, you should just sing in the school choir. No, they get to be Disney kids, they get to do all of those things and make real life-changing impacts. All of our student-athletes should get that same opportunity and to be people. That hasn't happened, but as a body we get a chance to do that. It is a growing shift across all the country to empower people to own their name, image, and likeness. When you wonder what your name, image, and likeness is, that is your face, your name, how you play, how you act, and all those kinds of things that you think would just be yours, but when you sign up to play college athletics or plan to play college athletics, you have to sign away those things as a high school athlete, as a college athlete, and in no other business do we require that same level of sacrifice and say, It's because we believe in the spirit of the game, or, The game will be different if people get paid. This isn't even talking about paying them to play the sport; this is about allowing them to be paid for using their name, using their image, and using the thing that God gave them the right to do.

Mr. President, I'd ask that my remarks be printed in the Journal and that my colleagues look forward to coming legislation to again increase the capacity for young folks to earn from their name, image, and likeness.
